

Three graves which were on the south end of the Sierra Ore Body, were moved from a point in the northwest corner of the cemetery to a point in the southwest corner. This places them where they will be in no danger of caving into the Hearst Pit. The graves were arranged in the same relative position as they were originally, with exception of the coffin of Myron L. Chase, which was originally placed with the head in the opposite direction from the other graves in the cemetery. This coffin was turned around, which places the head in the same relative position as all the others that are buried in this cemetery. The graves are now at a point bearing South 10 degrees, 15 seconds West, 150 feet from the original location. Pictures were taken of the three coffins and showed none had been disturbed and only one of the three was opened, which was the one of the child which we were unable to identify. Headboards are being painted showing the names of the persons and a fence is being placed around the cemetery. We had considerable difficulty in learning who was buried in these three graves and found that two of the graves were occupied by E. Martin and Myron L. Chase, but were unable to identify the child."ÇSanta Rita Cemetery #3 was also
