Thus, the limitation on the Marshal's term of office frequently Cextended to the Deputies as well. CTheir primary function was to Csupport the federal courts. The Marshals and their Deputies served the Csubpoenas, summonses, writs, warrants and other process issued by the Courts, made all the arrests and handled all the prisoners. They also Cdisbursed the money. The Marshals paid the fees and expenses of the Ccourt clerks, U.S. Attorneys, jurors and witnesses. They rented the Courtrooms and jail space and hired the bailiffs, criers, and janitors. CIn effect, they ensured that the courts functioned smoothly. CInspired by the richChistory of the Marshals Service, Donald V. Crowley created the painting C"Justice" as a tribute to the U.S. Marshals Service's 200C1989. © 1989 The Greenwich Workshop, Inc., CTrumbell, CT 06611CMarshals took care of the details, thereby freeing the judges and Cattorneys to concentrate on the cases before them. They made sure the Cwater pitchers were filled, the prisoners were

Deputies, often firing the Deputies who had worked for the previous CMarshal.